DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 21-25, 28-29, 45 and 62-80 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The prior art fails to teach a method of increasing the battery life of an alternating current iontophoretic device that includes, among all the limitations, the steps of delivering to a localized region of body tissue an amount of at least one barrier-modifying agent effective to alter the penetration barrier so as to reduce the voltage level necessary to achieve and maintain the target resistance level thereby facilitating transport of a compound of interest across the body tissue in combination with either (1) the barrier-modifying agent is effective to reduce the voltage required to achieve and maintain the target electrical resistance by at least 20% as compared to the voltage required to achieve and maintain the target electrical resistance in the absence of the barrier-modifying agent (claim 21); (2) the alternating current is applied at a voltage level in the range of about 1V to about 10V (claim 28); or (3) the alternating current is applied to the localized region of the body tissue for a time period in the range of approximately 10 minutes to 24 hours (claim 45).

The prior art most similar is to Gyory et al (USPNs 6,083,190; 5,990,179; 5,985,316 and 5,668,170). Each Gyory reference teaches the concept of being able to reduce voltage with the application of a barrier-modifying agent. However, Gyory does not teach the voltage required to achieve and maintain the target electrical resistance by at least 20%. Weaver et al (USPN 5,911,223) also teaches being able to reduce voltage with the application of a barrier-modifying agent. However, Weaver does not teach the voltage required to achieve and maintain the target electrical resistance by at least 20%.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
